Board orders sexual assault policy review for campuses

Bay State. The Higher Ed board declared "zero tolerance" for sexual violence after a recent rash of sexual assaults on state campuses.

State higher education officials have ordered a review of campus sexual assault policies.

"We will approach our work with urgency, given how important this matter is to our students, affecting both their sense of security and their ability to learn," Higher Education Commissioner Richard Freeland said in a statement.

The board, meeting at Bristol Community College earlier this week, heard from representatives at public campuses across the state about alleged sexual assaults and efforts to prevent violence on campuses.

The review will be conducted under a resolution calling for a coordinated effort at public colleges and universities focused on sexual assault prevention and the board's guidelines governing prevention and response.

The board declared "zero tolerance" for sexual violence including "stalking, dating violence, domestic violence, harassment and sexual assault, which can have devastating effects on individual victims, as well as serious negative consequences for colleges and universities," according to a press release from the state.

Quoted

"Whether or not a sexual act constitutes assault hinges on whether consent was given, which means that the definition of consent is crucial to both prevention and response." Gerberg

The board ordered a review of a 2008 report on best practices to prevent campus violence and plans call for Freeland to report back to the board by December.

The review comes after a recent spate of reported sexual assaults in campuses across the commonwealth, including Stonehill College, Massasoit Community College and Framingham State University.

Earlier this month, a group of Harvard University law professors criticized that school's new sexual assault policy, saying it was misguided and unfair.

Harvard had created a new policy earlier in the year after coming under fire from federal officials who saw the previous rules as lax.

Student groups at Harvard, meanwhile, have been pushing for the school to adopt an "affirmative consent" policy.

Rory Gerberg, a coordinator for Harvard Students Demand Respect, said the review "should consider a mandate for schools to incorporate an affirmative definition of consent."

"Whether or not a sexual act constitutes assault hinges on whether consent was given, which means that the definition of consent is crucial to both prevention and response," said Gerberg. "Campus sexual assault policies must provide clear standards in order to be effective in altering student behavior."

Gerberg said the state should consider policies adopted in New York and California.

Winchester. Man suspected of murdering mother found in NC

Matthew McAveeney / HANDOUT

Police have confirmed a 46-year-old man wanted for murdering his mother in Winchester has been arrested in North Carolina.

Matthew McAveeney has been wanted for armed assault with intent to murder after his mother, Barbara McAveeney, was found dead on Oct. 14 during a well-being check at a condominium building on Swanton Street.

Police issued an arrest warrant for McAveeney later that day.

Winchester Police Chief Kenneth C. Albertelli has confirmed McAveeney was arrested Tuesday in Belmont, North Carolina, a small city located 15 miles west of Charlotte.

McAveeney's arrest came after Massachusetts State Police alerted police in Belmont that he may have been in a local Walmart. Belmont officers later found him in the parking lot. McAveeney was reportedly combative and assaulted an officer.

Quoted

"This was a horrible crime, and all we can do as police officers is ensure that justice is served." Albertelli

Local authorities will travel to that jurisdiction "as soon as possible in order to begin the process of returning Mr. McAveeney to Massachusetts to account for his alleged crimes," according to the chief.

McAveeney is also wanted for a litany of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon charges as well as two counts of cruelty to animals.

New Bedford Marine murder suspect moved

Philippines. Joseph Scott Pemberton has been transferred to a military base after the death of a transgender Filipino.

The United States has transferred a Marine from New Bedford suspected of murdering a transgender Filipino to a Philippine military base under U.S. guard, the head of the Philippine armed forces said, in line with a legal agreement between the two countries.

U.S. Private First Class Joseph Scott Pemberton is accused of murdering Jeffrey Laude, who also goes by the name Jennifer, in Olongapo City, about 31 miles north of Manila.

General Gregorio Catapang told reporters Pemberton was flown to Manila military base Camp Aguinaldo.

"He was confined in a 20-foot air-conditioned van inside a U.S. military facility on our own base on Philippine soil," Catapang said. "He will be under 24-hour guard by an American soldier, but we also have two Filipino soldiers in the facility."

Colonel Brad Bartelt, spokesman for the U.S. Marine Corps Forces, Pacific, said Pemberton would remain in U.S. custody in line with the Visiting Forces Agreement with the United States.

He will remain in that country during the investigation and any judicial proceedings, according to the colonel. REUTERS

Solar businesses call for action on global warming

As a state task force prepares to discuss the future of solar energy in Massachusetts, solar businesses, community leaders and state officials gathered on Wednesday in support of the Clean Power Plan.

The proposal would limit the amount of carbon pollution from power plants and encourage investment in clean energy.

Environment Massachusetts released a letter signed by 67 Massachusetts solar business leaders, and more than 500 national ones, calling for federal action to reduce carbon emissions from the power sector.

The letter was delivered to the White House.

Downpours

Heavy rains may bring flooding

Steady, heavy rainfall that was slated to begin Wednesday night could cause flooding on Thursday, the National Weather Service said.

The weather service issued a flood watch for Eastern Massachusetts that went into effect at 5 p.m. Wednesday and was expected to last through 11 a.m. Thursday. Urban areas are most at risk for flooding. Heavier traffic than usual is expected for Thursday.

National Weather Service meteorologist Joe Dellicarpini told the Globe that on-and-off showers that began Wednesday would likely turn into steadier and heavier rain through the first part of Thursday.

"There's going to be some downpours," Dellicarpini said.

Boston filled to the brim with craft breweries and drinking apps

Over the past few years a number of breweries, distilleries, and drinking apps have been popping up in Boston.

Massachusetts has over 60 craft breweries in the entire state, and Greater Boston has some of the tastiest.

Trillium Brewing brews on Congress Street in Fort Point, and Downeast Cider recently moved to Charlestown. Local favorites, Backlash Beer and Slumbrew call Boston and Somerville home.

Just north of the city you'll smell the hops from Night Shift Brewery and Idle Hands in Everett, and Mystic Brewery in Chelsea.

Boston's first craft distillery, Bully Boy Distillers, is based in Roxbury where they produce small batches of rum, whiskey and vodka.

And, GrandTen Distilling makes their Boston spirits from their Southie distillery where they open their doors every Friday night and Saturday afternoon for tastings.

Like the craft breweries, Boston-based consumer startups have also been on the rise over the past few years, and to no surprise many of them revolve around drinking.

If you're looking for a beer recommendation, then local app Pintley will suggest a handful of beers for you based on your taste. And once you've found that new beer, Back Bay-based Drizly will deliver it to you in about 40 minutes.

If you prefer to go out tonight then BarUp crowd-sources the bar of the night for you, and onthebar will tell you if your favorite bartender is "on the bar."

If you've ever ordered wine while out, then Drync is an essential app for you.

Just snap a picture of the label and Drync will favorite that wine for you, tell you about the vineyard, and ship you a bottle (or a case) when you're craving a glass at home.

Whether it's brewing new beers, distilling new spirits or building new apps, entrepreneurship is alive and thriving in Boston.

Canada's parliament attacked, soldier is fatally shot nearby

Violence. The shootings followed an attack on two soldiers on Monday carried out by a convert to Islam.

A gunman attacked Canada's parliament on Wednesday, with gunfire erupting near where Prime Minister Stephen Harper was speaking, and a soldier was fatally shot at a nearby war memorial, stunning the Canadian capital.

The gunman, identified by CNN as Michael Zehaf-Bibeau, was shot dead in the parliament building and Harper was safely removed in incidents that may have been linked to Islamic militants.

Witness accounts indicated the man who shot dead the soldier guarding the National War Memorial in central Ottawa, went on to attack the parliament building minutes later. Canadian police said however they could not "at this point" confirm it was the same person.

Witnesses said a flurry of shots were fired after a gunman entered the parliament building, pursued by police.

The assault took place very near the room where Harper was meeting with members of his Conservative party, a government minister said.

The incident, shocking in Canada's normally tranquil capital, began shortly before 10 a.m. ET and was not over late in the afternoon. REUTERS

Guns drawn in parliament

Dramatic video footage posted by the Globe and Mail newspaper showed police with guns drawn inside the main parliament building. At least a dozen loud bangs can be heard on the clip, echoing through the hallway.

Veterans Affairs Minister Julian Fantino, a former policeman, told the Toronto Sun that parliament's head of security, Sergeant-at-Arms Kevin Vickers, shot dead a suspected gunman.

Canadian cabinet minister Jason Kenney said a guard in parliament buildings was also wounded. REUTERS

US jury convicts four ex-Blackwater guards in killings

Iraq. The verdict comes more than seven years after the shooting.

In a sweeping victory for the government, a federal jury on Wednesday found four former Blackwater guards guilty on nearly every count they faced in connection with the 2007 killing of 14 unarmed Iraqis.

Jurors found three of the ex-guards guilty of manslaughter and weapons charges, and a fourth guilty of murder.

A court clerk read the jury's verdict aloud to a packed courtroom, repeating the word "guilty" 71 times as the defendants sat and listened silently.

Former Blackwater security guard Evan Liberty / GETTY IMAGES

Paul Slough, Dustin Heard and Evan Liberty were convicted of voluntary manslaughter in connection with at least 12 deaths at Nisur Square, where the Blackwater unit had been trying to clear a path for a State Department convoy. The Washington jury also found the three guilty of attempted manslaughter in connection with the wounding of at least 11 Iraqis at the site.

The fourth guard, Nicholas Slatten, was found guilty of murder in connection with the first death at the traffic circle. REUTERS

The 2007 shooting

The killings took place at a Baghdad traffic circle.

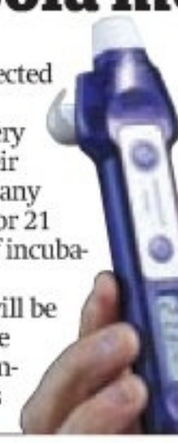
- The shooting stood out for its brazenness, even during a war replete with grisly incidents.
- It raised questions about the rules governing security contractors working overseas.

West African visitors. Health officials in the US tighten Ebola monitoring

Health officials unveiled new measures on Wednesday to carry out Ebola monitoring on anyone entering the country from the three nations at the center of a West African epidemic, increasing precautions to stop the spread of the virus.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said that beginning Monday, travelers from Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea will be directed to check in with health officials every day and report their temperatures and any Ebola symptoms for 21 days, the period of incubation for the virus.

The travelers will be required to provide emails, phone numbers and addresses for 21 days, and the information will be shared with local health authorities.



The travelers will be required to coordinate with local public health officials if they intend to travel within the United States. If a traveler does not report in, local health officials will take immediate steps to find the person. REUTERS

Today, Rosie O'Donnell is crowd-sourcing her job, Russell Brand is feeling welcomed and embraced, Taye Diggs is spreading lies about Sting, Zachary Quinto is on Team Zellweger and Miles Teller is asking the tough questions.

@Rosie: What topic should we discuss on the view today ?

@rustyrockets: Media reaction to my UNRELEASED book - "Who are you to say anything?" or "How dare you say something".

@TayeDiggs: Sting is the coolest dude I know and he's 98 but he looks younger because he uses sunscreen.

@ZacharyQuinto: kudos to renee zellweger for responding with grace and intelligence to a deluge of unfounded accusation. A classy and thoughtful statement.

@Miles_Teller: Does anyone actually own a chia pet.. And if so, how do you have the time to take care of it with all of your cats?

Zellweger speaks out about her, um, 'different look'

If you were anywhere near the Internet earlier this week, you heard about Renee Zellweger and reactions to her recent red carpet appearance. Or, more specifically, reactions to her face. It's a little odd that the story got so much attention, because the actress had been photographed in public last month (see page 12) and nobody made a big deal about it. Well, a big deal was certainly made earlier this week, and apparently, Zellweger was listening. In a move uncharacteristic of celebrity culture, she has offered a response. Only it's more awesome in theory than in practice. "I'm glad folks think I look different! I'm living a different, happy, more fulfilling life, and I'm thrilled that perhaps it shows," she tells People magazine. "It seems the folks who come digging around for some nefarious truth which doesn't exist won't get off my porch until I answer the door."

Zellweger somehow pulls off being both folksy and coy!

"My friends say that I look peaceful. I am healthy. For a long time I wasn't doing such a good job with that," she says.

As for talk of a drastic change in her appearance? That's just time, baby: "People don't know me in my 40s," Zellweger explains. "People don't know me healthy for a while. Perhaps I look different. Who doesn't as they get older? But I am different. I'm happy."

Hilariously, the story is devoid of the phrase "plastic surgery" or any words like that. The mag simply uses the euphemism "her different look." We have a feeling this won't really keep people off her porch.

ZELLWEGER IS PICTURED EARLIER THIS WEEK, AND, INSET, IN 2002.

There are some places Daniel Radcliffe can't just casually show up without stirring up rumors and speculation. Case in point: a recent visit by the "Harry Potter" star to the set of the new "Star Wars" movie. Radcliffe insists to MTV News that he was just visiting some old friends — "All the 'Potter' crew were doing it, so I was mainly [there] to see them," he explains — and not to film a completely awesome, franchise-blending cameo. "I didn't realize I'd caused commotion. I'm not in the movie," Radcliffe says by way of apology.

Billy Bob opens up about Angie's blood, finally

If you've been waiting and waiting for Billy Bob Thornton to finally address that whole Angelina Jolie wearing a vial of blood around her neck thing from more than a decade ago, well, first of all, you're weird. And second of all, it's your lucky day! While speaking at Loyola Marymount University in LA recently, the "Sling Blade" actor was asked about his and his ex-wife's infamous pieces of jewelry. "You know those lockets you buy that are clear and you put a picture of your granny in it or something like that and wear it around your neck? That's what it was," he explains. "She thought it would be interesting and romantic if we took a little razor blade and sliced our fingers, smeared a little blood on these lockets and you wear it around your neck just like you wear your son or daughter's baby hair in one. Same thing. From that, we were wearing quart jars of blood around our necks. And we were vampires and we lived in a dungeon." I knew it!

Hey, it's Jolie, Thornton and two vials of blood. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

A superhero brawl breaks out in Hollywood

New Yorkers have to contend with costumed comic book and movie characters in Times Square hocking photo opps to tourists lately, but it's also been a regular fixture on Hollywood Boulevard for years. And, well, sometimes with that many superheroes around, it gets messy. This week, a brawl broke out between a few of the colorful characters, creating one of the most entertaining local news play-by-plays in recent memory.

1 "At the beginning, we see Mr. Incredible and Batgirl struggling. Chewbacca tries to break it up. Batgirl scratches Mr. Incredible," local CBS reporter Suzanne Marques reports. This is what you see in the image on the right.

2 "Waldo and Freddy Krueger step in. They try to hold back Mr. Incredible, who gets loose, chases Batgirl, throws a punch."

3 Another costumed vendor — who identifies himself only as Batman — says it's just the result of a bad element on the Walk of Fame. "The bad ones, they roam up and down, so they cross paths. ... It's less now because we have a lot more police presence here since last year." Last year, by the way, two Captain Americas beat up a Spider-Man, prompting more cops to patrol the area.

Sad Keanu kills everyone in "John Wick" because they killed this dog. / DAVID LEE

'John Wick'

1 A not-very-memorable name titles a premise you won't soon forget: Keanu Reeves plays a retired super-assassin who decides to take out a mobster (Michael Nyqvist) and his seemingly endless minions after his son kills his beagle. In his defense, it's a really super-cute beagle.

'Ouija'

2 What's worse than a horror movie based on a "spirit board" (and one that holds zero supernatural powers, so stop thinking that)? There was already not only a movie but a franchise about this, namely the "Witchboard" trilogy. Anyway, this one has a bunch of teens awakening a spirit, and the reliably ghoulish Lin Shaye ("Austin Powers") is there to munch on some scenery, too.

'Birdman'

3 Get this: Michael Keaton plays a fading actor who once starred in a comic book franchise about a winged superhero and is now putting on an ambitious Broadway show. Perhaps more interestingly, this comedy is all done as a fake single shot, thanks to "Babel" director Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu.

'Dear White People'

4 One of Sundance's most deserving hits, this comedic drama examines racial tension and black identity at an Ivy League school when it's announced a group of white students are throwing a party lampooning black stereotypes. "Everyone Hates Chris" star Tyler James Williams stars.

'Whiplash'

5 While he was popping up on screens in last year's fairly evil "That Awkward Moment," Miles Teller was at Sundance scoring raves for his performance as an aspiring jazz drummer with a scary teacher (J.K. Simmons).

'The Irish Pub'

6 Sorry, people who frequent the many cheap, bro-attracting Irish bars that clog the nation's metropolises: This documentary isn't about those but about actual pubs in Ireland, which have a deep, proud tradition, even if some of them were also probably called "The Blarney Stone."

'Fury'

7 Some are complaining that this war movie in which Brad Pitt kills Nazis is not "Inglourious Basterds." Look, Pitt is good at killing Nazis, so why not another, more serious one, this time with Logan Lerman and Shia LaBeouf?

'The Book of Life'

8 Horror and fantasy guru Guillermo del Toro ("Pacific Rim," "The Strain") tries his hand at children's animation, putting his name on this tale of a young man hopping through multiple realms. Diego Luna, Zoe Saldana and Channing Tatum lend their voices.

'The Best of Me'

9 Here's yet another Nicholas Sparks movie, and we're going to assume there's a hesitant romance in a pretty location and almost certainly a comically melodramatic third-act twist. James Marsden and Michelle Monaghan star in this one.

'Gone Girl'

10 Gillian Flynn's best-seller scored David Fincher to direct it and an ideal male lead: Ben Affleck, playing a man everyone hates because they think he killed his wife (Rosamund Pike). It also gives Neil Patrick Harris and Tyler Perry the chance to play serious(ish).

Let's go high-tech on the scares

Fed up with tired traditions like using sheets for ghost costumes or party gags like using grapes as eyeballs? Fear not: Metro has created a gadget-inspired guide to help frighten your friends.

WANISE MARTINEZ, METRO WORLD NEWS

Front of house

A creepy entrance is a must. For that potted plant on the porch, hide some luminous eyes in the bushes. The Peep n' Peepers Flashing Eyes Halloween Lights are weather-resistant cartoon eyes that seem nice at first sight, but when illuminated at night may cause a shiver.

Living room

As soon as people get into the house, invite them to take off their coats to feel more comfortable. With the Coat Rack Monster, this common task will take an evil turn as the motion-activated meanie lunges out from behind the clothes. After the first screams, walk with them through the living room, where things will get a little hazy. The Black Light Bubble Fogger Machine combines all of the coolest effects: It produces fog-filled bubbles that float toward people and pop right near them, turning into fog. It also projects a black light.

Kitchen

Sure, the traditional pumpkin should be present in your kitchen, but upgrade it with the Standing Jack-O-Lantern Man with LED lights. Uttering the phrase "come closer" in a ghoulish voice, it will send chills down every visitor's spine.

The motion-activated item also has animated eyes and a mouth that makes him seem alive. To complete the kitchen (and other parts of the house) use the Webcaster Gun to create spiderwebs in a flash.

Bedroom

Re-create the bedroom scene from "The Exorcist" with the Regan MacNeil Animated Standing Prop. It's motion- and sound-activated, rotates its head 360 degrees and plays dialogue from the movie.

Or add eerie ambience with the Spooky Halloween Shadow Light, which can project Halloween-themed shadows onto the wall of a dark room (and freak out anybody you're sharing a bed with).

Bathroom

The scariest tactic might be the easiest: Just don't clean it before the guests arrive.

But one accessory will make the difference when guests try to use it: the Pop-Up Zombie Toilet, a grotesque animated decoration with light-up eyes and a pop-up action that will make everyone forget about peeing. And when they think about leaving the bathroom, the Black Jumping Spider will get them! It's a freaky arachnid with illuminated eyes and strange noises.

Backyard

Consider using the Escape from the Grave Zombie, which is covered in fake blood and moves its arms. This Hanging Bat will increase the effect with its LED eyes.

And then, suddenly, a vampire/ghost/Grim Reaper can appear in the sky if you dress a remote-controlled flying drone and ask a friend to help you control it.

How to rock capes

Capes aren't just for superheroes, witches and "Harry Potter" fans — they're one of the season's hottest trends. We asked three bloggers to show you how to how to pull off the look.

ELODIE NOEL, MWN

Name: Amy Marietta
Age: 22
From: New York
Blog: ViviereBella.com

"Capes make you feel elegantly powerful and give you a certain aura when you walk—superhero status, or as I like to say 'girl boss status,'" says Marietta.

Her styling tips: Go with a bold color if you want to stand out.

"But you may get less wear out of your piece," she warns. "If you go with a neutral, you can style the look many ways and it will be a staple piece for your fall wardrobe."

To avoid looking too boxy, Marietta styled her look with a lightweight tan sweater, a high-waisted skirt, a leather cross body bag and tan ankle boots. Shauns sunglasses in taupe complete her look.

Name: Aurelia Mamou
Age: 31
From: Paris
Blog: Absolutely Glamourous.fr

"Capes were all over the fall runways, with Saint Laurent going for a Sixties-vibe while Burberry went for a more casual blanket-thrown-over-the-shoulders look," says Mamou. "Styling the cape — like I've done with my Ted Baker pick here — is easier than it looks." For a modern take, Mamou says wear it with a hat, boyfriend jeans and a fringe bag.

Name: Nelia Belkova
Age: 30
From: Toronto, Canada
Blog: StyleBlog.ca

"In the fall, when the weather tends to be unpredictable, I love the idea of throwing on a cape jacket. This one's from H&M Studio Fall 2014 and can be worn with or without sleeves," says Belkova. To balance out the bulkiness of the coat, she recommends a slimmer silhouette on the bottom, like knee-high boots and skinny jeans. "In general, I recommend balancing out the cape by wearing slim cut bottoms, or pairing a longer cape with a dress and tights in the fall."

Five things I like about you

L. Jean Schwartz / PROVIDED

Your family notices cool things about you

"I volunteer at the community garden near my house, and I had never thought to put that in my profile," says Schwartz. Her mother suggested including it because she thought it revealed something new about her.

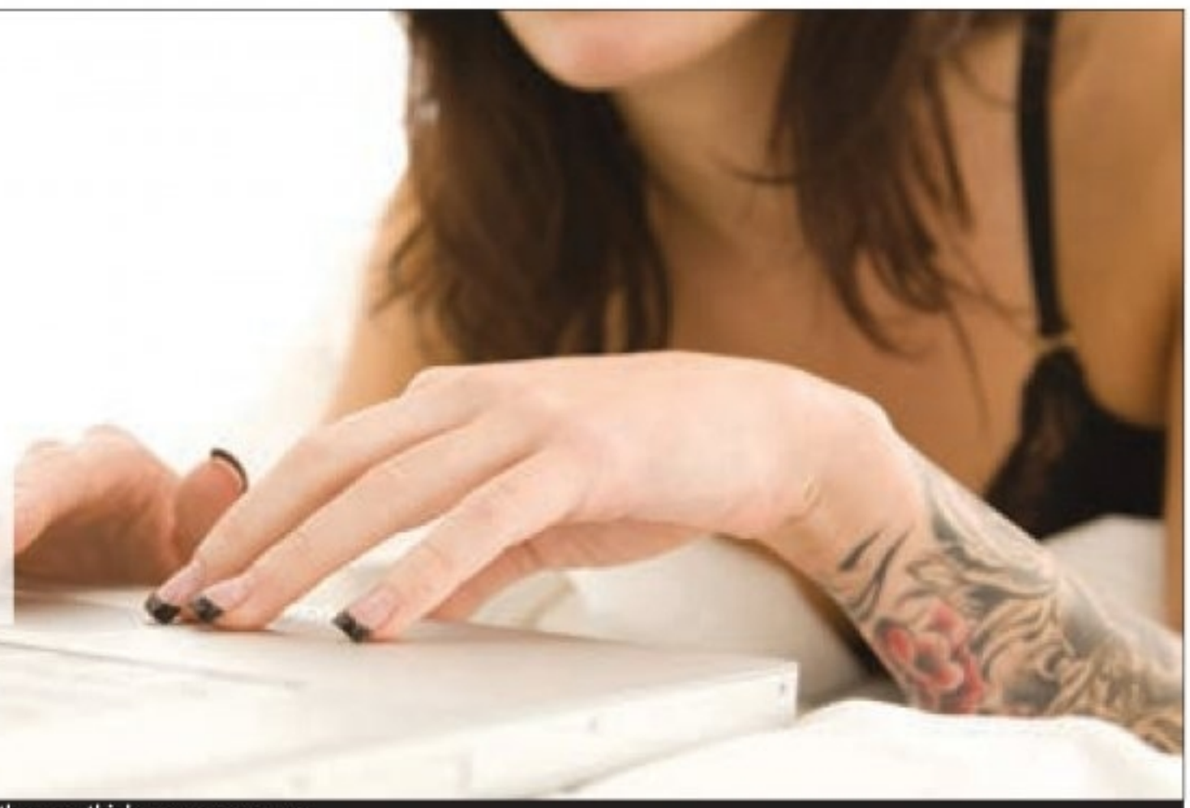
This blogger let her mom take over her OkCupid profile

The weird part

Things can get uncomfortable

Schwartz describes her brother as a romantic at heart, which made things interesting. "He did a first draft of it and he said something like, 'If you are interested in participating in an experiment where I'm really hoping to fall in love,'" she recalls. "And I said, 'Whoa.'"

Unfortunately, that line didn't make the final draft.



Maybe your family knows you better than you think. / INGRAM PUBLISHING

Experiments. A 20-something single asks those closest to her to play matchmaker.

Like many comedians and writers, L. Jean Schwartz often mines stories from her own life when she performs on stage, especially ones about what it's like being a single woman in Los Angeles.

"I started doing a bit about how I have terrible taste in men," Schwartz says. "I enjoyed doing it, but I don't like it when people complain about their lives and don't do anything about it."

The 20-something Schwartz had dabbled in online dating on and off for years and began thinking of potential experiments she could do while searching for a potential match. A few months later, her blog "The PostModern Matchmaker" was born. On it, Schwartz puts a uniquely 21st century twist on generations of matchmaking traditions — by asking her mother, brother and closest friends to take over her OkCupid account for a week and talking to her about the kinds of men they think she'd like.

"We've done a different matchmaker every week," she explains. "At the start of the week we rewrite the profile together and they sort of monitor the account during the week."

Schwartz's very first matchmaker for the experiment was her mother, and she says they both learned a lot from the experience. "I generally didn't talk to my mom about dating in college," she says. "But I was super excited [about the experiment]. My parents have been married for 30-plus years, so there was a whole learning curve when it came to online dating."

Profile questions

Moms are pretty genuine

Working with her mother on her online dating profile was an interesting experience because "everything my mom wanted to write was very genuinely sincere." She recalls when they discussed how to fill out the "I spend a lot of time thinking about..." section of her profile. "She wanted to put 'climate change,'" Schwartz says. "And then I said 'Yeah, I think about climate change, but I am not putting that first.'" After discussing it further, climate change did make the list, albeit further down.

Here are a few more things Schwartz says the experiment taught her:

The matches were revealing

"My dad's a lawyer and my brother was an Eagle Scout and I'm a vegetarian writer," she says. "And my mom picked three people and they were a lawyer, an Eagle Scout and a vegetarian writer." Schwartz noted that her mom hadn't realized the connection until she heard her joke about it in a set.

Dating was simple in the '70s

Schwartz's parents' approach to dating was very different than that of their children. "Now I have regular conversations with both my parents about dates," Schwartz says, recalling how she once mentioned that she had never really asked men out on dates herself. "They were in the dating scene in the '70s, when girls would ask guys out. She was surprised I felt that way. It really made me think about those rules. Why don't I ask guys out?"

Down the rabbit hole once more

Review. Wheelock Family Theatre offers a new take on the "Alice in Wonderland" story.

The Wheelock Family Theatre kicks off its 34th season with "Alice," a new musical adaptation of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" books.

Written and directed by 24-year-old Stoneham native (and frequent Wheelock performer) Andrew Barbato, "Alice" takes the audience on a fun trip down the rabbit hole for a coming-of-age tale that hits a sweet spot between the fairy tale version of the story and the trippy "White Rabbit" version.

Rife with humor (some of which goes right over the younger heads in the crowd), "Alice" also boasts some not-so-subtle messages about how nothing is impossible, how important it is to help others and the high price of perfectionism.

While Barbato's enthusiasm for the story is clear from the start, his narrative sometimes loses its way. In Act One, you might find yourself wondering who's who and how you got to certain places. But stick with it. By the time you get to the Mad Hatter's tea party in Act Two, everything makes sense — except, of course, the logic of the tea.

Though the music, written by Lesley DeSantis, isn't something you'll be singing on your way out the door, it is warm, touching and perfectly appropriate for this piece. Alice (a vocally stunning Maritza Bostic) and the Queen of Hearts (the always impressive Leigh Barrett) share the show's finest musical moment, a lump-in-your-throat rendition of "Paint the Roses Red."

Matthew Lazure's set, which feels like it could work in a Tim Burton film, is the perfect backdrop for "Alice," while Scott Clyve's lighting design enhances the magic of Barbato's impressive debut production.

A $ign of the times

Hip-hop. Ty Dolla $ign is still preparing for his big debut, but he has even bigger things on his mind.

Ty Dolla $ign says "It's time for the new chapter." / GETTY IMAGES

Ty Dolla $ign might be hip-hop's man of the moment, but it's not the present that the 29-year-old appears concerned with.

"I'm just trying to come up with the next chapter of music," he says. "When we first came out, our sound didn't exist, and now every artist has that sound. That's what tells us it's time for the new chapter."

The "we" he refers to consists of himself, rapper YG and producer DJ Mustard, three Los Angeles natives whose self-described "ratchet" brand of hip-hop and R&B has dominated clubs and airwaves in 2014. Mustard has been churning out hits since 2011, when he broke out beyond his city with Tyga's "Rack City." YG had a coming out party of his own earlier this year with the release of his critically acclaimed album "My Krazy Life." And now, following the success of his Beach House mixtape series and a handful of high-profile guest appearances, it's Ty Dolla Sign's turn under the bright lights.

After spending the summer opening for his Taylor Gang label mate Wiz Khalifa, Ty Dolla Sign — his birth name is Tyrone Griffin — hopped right into a tour of his own. But even in the midst of his first nationwide headlining tour, he's prepping the release of his upcoming major label debut, "Free TC." It's a project that Griffin hopes will showcase his evolution.

"I've been experimenting with different snares, and I'm switching drummers so there won't be as many snaps. So just expect different sounds," he says, before cutting himself short. "I'm not going to give away all my ideas, but it'll be like when Jimi Hendrix went from the Experience to the Band of Gypsys."

As to whether Atlantic Records approves of its signee moving away from the sounds that made him a bankable star, Griffin claims he and his label execs are on the same page.

"They get it," he says. "They understand that it's not about following the last hit that came out. It's about putting out something new. We're the trendsetters."

Brotherly love

Behind the album title

The album title of "Free TC" is a nod to Griffin's younger brother TC, who is currently serving a life sentence for murder. Ty Dolla $ign says that his brother did not commit the crime and the album's intention is to raise awareness for TC's cause.

"It's a statement and it's literal," he says of the title. "I'm taking the money from this album and I'm putting it into getting my brother out of jail and bringing awareness to everybody that gets injustice and gets forgotten about."

This British band's retro psychedelic rock is so pure you'd swear they fell through a wormhole in the Summer of Love. As horrifying and destructive as war is, its practice is inextricably bound up in the history of civilization, whose noblest values seem to contradict it. Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. An old idea may have current relevance. A successful partnership can be achieved if you don't try to manipulate matters. Be a team player.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Someone may have an unhealthy interest in your personal life. Keep your private information in a secure location. Don't flaunt your cash while shopping or traveling.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You will gain personal pride and outside recognition from the work you do to help others. Your concern for the underdog will ease the worries of someone less fortunate.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Your colleagues and friends will not be as honest as you. You will be told what you want to hear, not what is really happening.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Romance looks positive. This is a good time to clear up money matters and outstanding debts. You can make a difference in your community by signing up for volunteer work.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. You will gain support from an unlikely source. New and valuable contacts can be made. Your infectious enthusiasm will bring you increased attention and the help you need.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't let anyone get to you. Avoid arguments by staying calm and doing your own thing. A family member will need immediate care. Do your best, without criticizing.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Be mindful of minor health concerns. Keep your medical and dental records up to date. Remember to include any pets when you are scheduling family checkups and appointments.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. It's time to have some fun. You are the perfect host, so gather your friends and plan a party or activity. Don't neglect anyone. Spread your cheer around.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Unrest at home will have you heading for the great outdoors. Take a breather away from conflict. A short road trip will provide a pleasant diversion.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You will be amazed that so many people seem to feel the same way you do. Talks regarding partnership deals and contracts will turn in your favor. Make the most of your day.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Set your imagination free. Your plans to change your present profession will motivate you. Investigate the best way you can make your ideas come to life.

Those who oppose Sykes' column are really just envious

Re: 'Sykes must be kidding' (Metro, Oct. 22) I always get a chuckle when some letter writer who is financially challenged demonstrates his/her envy and rips into columnist Timothy Sykes. Maybe these writers should spend their free time learning how to invest rather than writing negatively about Mr. Sykes.

RON FALCON, VIA EMAIL

Obama's policies are killing American greatness

President Obama and the Democrats in Congress in too many cases are moving America away from the very things that made this country great. This includes free markets, free enterprise, a strong military and a love of country. In addition, the president has also instituted unreasonable and cumbersome regulations that inhibit prosperity.

For example, his regulations now make drilling for oil on federal lands very difficult. He has also stalled the construction of the Keystone Pipeline.

That new oil pipeline would safely bring newly developed oil from private lands in North Dakota to Oklahoma and Louisiana where it can be refined. That would help make America more energy-independent as well as create many new jobs.

Furthermore, the excessive regulations for coal have brought that industry to its knees. America needs a change in direction. Stopping Obama in his goals is good for America.

Better to have a slow moving government than one going the wrong way.

Daily fantasy sports industry raking in cash

Fantasy sports. Online sports gambling is illegal, but DraftKings and FanDuel are exempt from the law.

We're living in the golden age of fantasy sports, and companies like DraftKings, based out of Boston, and FanDuel are reaping the benefits.

The relatively new businesses target a specific segment of fantasy sports players: those who want action each and every day. For instance, in regular fantasy baseball leagues, owners draft their teams prior to the start of the season and the only way they can add or dump players on their roster throughout the season is through trades or through the waiver wire. In the world of daily fantasy, owners can draft entirely new teams each day. Got a hunch David Ortiz is going to go 4-for-4 at the plate tonight? Draft him, and hope that others don't.

Maybe quit your day job?

Path to daily fantasy success:

- A minimum deposit for DraftKings is $5, but $25 - $2,000 is recommended.
- Peter Jennings on quitting your job to become a fantasy sports pro: "Make sure you have a track record of doing well for a period of time. Set aside living expenses, and don't get too high with the big wins and don't get too stressed about the big losses."

The daily fantasy industry is growing rapidly, and along the way it is making millionaires out of some of their more lucky — or skilled — players. Denver native Peter Jennings quit his job at Charles Schwab in 2011 in order to focus on daily fantasy full time. It paid off. Jennings won $1 million in a DraftKings tournament this past August and had won hundreds of thousands of dollars prior to that.

"I realized that playing fantasy was becoming more lucrative than my day job," Jennings told Metro. "I was a poker player throughout college and I was playing regular fantasy sports for a while, but the day I found out about daily fantasy, it was a euphoric experience."

Jennings and DraftKings insist that those who win big aren't just gamblers on a hot streak. They call daily fantasy a "game of skill," and say that most everyone who has become wealthy through playing analyzes sports statistics for hours upon hours each day.

"It's much like trading on the stock market, except you're buying individual players," Jennings said. "It's definitely a game of skill. It's very data-driven. You're always crunching numbers."

Gambling on sports online was outlawed in the United States in 2006 due to that year's Unlawful Internet Gambling Enforcement Act. But the act excluded fantasy sports that meet specific requirements. FanDuel began its site in 2009.

Boston-based DraftKings.com, led by CEO Jason Robins, is one of the two most popular daily fantasy sports companies in the world. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

DraftKings popped up in 2012. Investors soon caught on, pumping in millions. Today, DraftKings has over one million active users and over $100 million will be awarded in the 2014 football season alone. DraftKings also entered a professional partnership with the Patriots just last week.

Cynics will say that the good times won't last forever. Regulators will eventually catch up, and the loophole in the 2006 act will eventually close.

"We don't even consider it a loophole,," said Femi Wasserman, VP of communications at DraftKings. "We don't stay up at night worrying about regulators 'catching up.' We plan on being here. We view ourselves as a start-up and we're on a typical start-up curve. We believe that what we do is legal and we believe that our customers love fantasy sports, first and foremost."

NFL. Revis shows up late for practice, sent home

Darrelle Revis was reportedly sent home by Patriots head coach Bill Belichick on Tuesday, after the cornerback showed up late for practice, according to The Boston Globe.

Patriots players were told to report to Gillette Stadium at 7:30 a.m. on Tuesday after having several days off following last Thursday's 27-25 win over the Jets.

It was not made clear how late Revis was and the Patriots declined to comment on the matter in the Globe report.

In 2009, Belichick sent home Randy Moss, Derrick Burgess, Adalius Thomas and Gary Guyton for showing up late to practice despite a snowstorm. Less than a year after the incident, only Guyton remained on the Patriots roster. MATT BURKE
